

girl hood

Since we were little girls, we've been taught to play with dolls, wear skirts, adore the color pink. But they didn't teach us the most valuable things, like supporting other women, and the "hidden girl code". Instead everything is a pathetic competition to us. And because everything is a pathetic competition, we learn new flaws everyday.

Then we learn

the mess we have to go through on anormal basis.

PERIODS, hair, body management and BOYS. Then we start to learn how horrible boys can be. Like what will happen if I reject his prom invitation? Boys are not really part of my life since

I never been a step near that relationship

EVER. I would like to though? I hate how everything relates to boys.
